Excerpt: . . . 11 The mission of Naval District Washingtons security force is to secure good order and discipline within each installation, maintain-ing a safe environment for installation personnel to perform their assigned mission and to protect installation property within the in-stallation boundaries or fence line. Naval District Washingtons installation supports the Vice Presi-dents residence and one of our national clocks at the National Re-search Lab and Navy Test Pilot School and the U. S. Naval Acad-emy, to name just a few. Clearly, the professionals in the Naval District Washington secu-rity force perform a job vital to our national security. I am pleased to tell you that our Naval District Washington security force is well trained in its important mission. All officers receive basic training that covers a variety of topics needed to their jobs, including traffic law enforcement, radio communication, patrol procedures, the rules of evidence, and the Uniform Code of Military Justice. They also attend sustainment training in accordance with Navy standards and are provided supplemental training for specialized areas as needed for a particular position. In addition, Naval District Washington Headquarters Command is a member of a team led by the U. S. Army that has been tasked by the Office of the Secretary of Defense to develop uniform stand-ards, including a new trainee curriculum for the Department of De-fense security. We stand ready to implement the recommendations that come from this team so Naval District Washington security force has...
