Often the milk question does not get such a square deal as Mr. Haney has given it. Every city has its yellow journals which care more for sensations than the more prosy facts. You are all familiar with many illustrations of this. I will cite only one. I was in Kansas at one time, and the milk dealers of a certain city were going to put the retail price up to seven cents per quart, and some of the newspapers had been abusing the dealers in outrageous terms for raising this price. One morning one of the newspapers came out with unbounded commendation of one dealer who had announced his intention of selling milk at five cents a quart. The babies will rise up and call him...
