Excerpt: . . . shall be placed on the building, and this glorious temple shall stand forth on the heavenly zion, as an eternal monutrent of the grace of God bestowed on sinful man. BOOK OF ZECHARIAH. The writer of this book was the son of Barachiah and grandson of Iddo, and of the sacerdotal race, of the tribe of Levi. He began to prophesy about two months after Haggai, in the second year of Darius Hystaspis, and continued his ministrations for about two years, N being called by God for the same purpose that Haggai was, viz. , to exhort and encourage the Jews to proceed in the great work of rebuilding the temple. We are told by Ezra, (chapter 6. 14,) that the Jews prophesied through the prophesying of Haggai and Zechariah. The style of Zechariah is so similar to that of Jeremiah, that the...
